DERRY, N. H., 1906.

It is with great regret that we announce the resignation of Miss Emma T. Cone. We feel that we have lost one of the most efficient members of the CRITIC board. As our editor-in-chief she has worked faithfully. Few could have carried on the CRITIC so successfully with so little help from the student body. We are very sorry that she feels no longer able to continue her duties. We fully realize, however, that we have not lost a friend, and still have one on whom we may depend.

During the last few years there has been a renaissance in the Academy. There has been a reawakening of Pinkerton to the consciousness of her nature and capacities, and to the value of her inheritance. This revival has shown itself not merely in an attempt to produce what is new, but also to resuscitate or make better what was old.

The evidences of this renaissance are seen in the following: the change of our curriculum to meet State requirements, the removal of the library to more commodious quarters, the renovation of the gymnasium, the conversion of a portion of the Old Academy to the uses of music, the strengthening of the department in drawing, the increase in our faculty, the great advance in athletics, the revival of the Philomathean, the maintainance of a fine mid-winter course of entertainments, the superb dramatic exhibitions, and not least the re-establishment of the CRITIC.

The re-establishment of the CRITIC was a happy achievement. Happy not only because it connects with and maintains the traditions of the past, but because it has stimulated the literary spirit of the students and furnished that spirit with an opportunity for a freer, more natural and more spontaneous development. The CRITIC has strengthened the loyalty of the student body. It has encouraged and supported every legitimate interest. It has elevated the tone of the Academy and given it dignity. Through its exchanges it has become a part of the noble fraternity of schools and academies, and through its subscribers, and in other ways has sounded forth the worth of Pinkerton. It has also aroused a livelier interest on the part of the alumni in the Academy, and it has drawn and is drawing the alumni closer to our beloved institution and closer to each other. The CRITIC has also done good service in giving illustration and practical force to the important educational law of beneficent reaction. The student who constantly falls a little behind his class in arithmetic and algebra and is in a chronic state of listless discouragement, is led to write for the CRITIC. In so doing he is electrified by the discovery of his taste and genius for writing. Does this mean that he is to be allowed to devote his whole strength and time to writing? Not at all; but it does mean that, if he has a wise teacher, the very courage, energy and self-confidence gained by writing for the CRITIC will be turned back in a beneficent reaction on his arithmetic; just as the vigor, accuracy and self-control learned in gymnasium drill are often turned on the mastery of that most difficult of arts, English spelling.

The Spectator.

On turning the corner I was almost knocked down by a well-dressed young man of medium height and sturdy build. As he started to apologize, I looked into his face and saw a merry twinkle in his eyes. Looking again I recognized my old friend the Spectator whom I had not seen for several years. He told me he was out inspecting schools. I invited him to Pinkerton Academy. He accepted.

The next day I conducted him over the Academy. He congratulated us on the situation of our building and on its furnishings, especially on the excellent selection of books in our Library. There was a meeting of the Editors of the CRITIC to which he was admitted. He was very much impressed by their earnest manner, and sympathized with them in their efforts to arouse the school to the support of its paper. Fully appreciating the situation, he kindly offered to write up several of his experiences of travel.

The following is a soliloquy which the Spectator heard from the lips of a North Carolina native.

"Yes. I'm a mule. I've always been a mule, and always expect to be a mule. If anyone objects to my being a mule, let him object, for I was made a mule and can't be anything else. There's a poor white trash man owns me. He owns lots of dogs too. But for real beauty, I am it. My boss doesn't see it my way. My beautiful ears and my lovely voice he does not seem to appreciate. But I'll fix him. I'll give him a stomach-ache that will make him see stars. I can do it. Those rear legs of mine rarely fail to hit. Why do I say this? 'Cause he abuses me, cudgels me. He makes me work like a nigger. I do all his work except what his old woman does. I pull his plough; I tote his garden 'sass' to market in two bouncing panniers; I tote his hens too, but hate it all the same. Hen racket is dreffully jarring to the nerves. I like to shake the eggs sometimes. Lots of them go to smash. Then he wallops me. When he gets a 'jag' on he wallops me till my legs aren't worth thirty cents. Oh he's a dandy—my boss! I'd like to get him into a corner. Wouldn't I love him though! You bet. I'd give him some vigorous jove-pats with my hoofs. He couldn't forget such marks of affection. They'd stay by him a long time. Do I want to kill him? No, I just want to have him ache as I ache. That's the mule of it."

A Chemistry Recitation.

PLACE.—Mr. Campbell's room.

TIME.—Second period.

CHARACTERS.—Professor; Miss B——, his star pupil; and a Voice.

(Enter class with much noise and conversation).

Professor.—(Begins recitation by calling on Miss B——). "Our lesson today deals with alcohol and its preparation. What is alcohol, Miss B——?"

Miss B.—"An alcohol is a hydrate of any one of the Hydro-carbon series."

Prof.—"How would you prepare same?"

Miss B.—"Take any liquid which contains sugar and——"

Prof. — (Interrupting). "Now, Miss B—, if you were going to give me a recipe for making fudge, would you say: 'Take some money and go down to the store at West Derry and buy a pound of sugar. Then take some more money and buy some milk and take it home.' Don't you see that you are not telling me how to make fudge? When I ask about the preparation of a compound, please don't begin by saying, 'Take a little of this and a little of that, etc.' The 'take' doesn't have anything to do with it, and you ought not to say 'take', at least when you are talking about alcohol. I wouldn't 'take' any if I could."

The lesson proceeds, and all goes well until the process of fermentation is being described. The professor is talking about yeast.

Prof.—"What great use do we make of yeast?"

Miss B.—"In raising bread."

Prof.—"What else?"

Voice.—"Sponge cake!"

Prof.—"This is no time for joking. If there is any one in the room who cannot be serious, he may leave it at once. Otherwise, I expect to have the room quiet and orderly."

Order is restored, but not before the Voice inquires if "Harvey Wilson raised his mustache with yeast."

Prof.—Now, Miss B—, if we distil corn juice what do we get?"

Miss B.—"Whiskey."

Prof.—"And if fruit juice is distilled?"

Miss B.—"Brandy."

Voice.—"What do we get if we distil bug-juice?"

This provokes snickers and groans on the part of class and a frown on that of the much-enduring professor. When the class has recovered, the recitation proceeds.

Prof.—"Is alcohol good for a person?"

Miss B.—(emphatically) "No!"

Prof.—"Isn't it? I think the alcohol is good, but the person who uses it is of no use to the world" (Expresses his views on temperance.) "It is the same with many other compounds. Take gunpowder, for instance. Isn't that good?"

Miss B.—Ye-e-s. But——"

Prof.—"If I should give you a keg of gunpowder and you should insert a fuse in it and put it under your neighbor's house and then light it, what would it do?"

Miss B.—(emphatically) “Blow up the barn!”

At this unexpected exhibition of intelligence, the class explodes, and order is not restored for several minutes.

Prof.—(with tears, but not those of sorrow, in his eyes) “Wasn’t that powder good?”

Miss B.—“Yes.”

Prof.—“But would you be called very good?”

At the sudden personal turn given to affairs the poor girl gives up in despair and takes her seat. The professor calls on some one else and resumes his questions.

Prof.—“That will do for common alcohol. What other kinds do we have?”

Voice.—“That found in Jones’ XXX, Duffy’s Pure, Milwaukee, and in several imported kinds of soft drinks.”

The professor is dumbfounded with the knowledge displayed by one of his most orderly and respected pupils, and is about to send him from the room, when the bell rings and in the confusion of changing classes, he forgets all about it.

Philomathean Society.

The Philomathean Debating Society this year, through the encouragement of the trustees, faculty and alumni of the academy, together with the general interest of the students, has been having at least its usual prosperity during the winter term.

The membership, for example, has increased from nineteen to thirty-three members, making an increase of nearly seventy-four per cent. The attendance has been good also. There have been as a rule from fourteen to twenty-five members present at each meeting, as well as a number of visitors. The average attendance of interested persons is about thirty.

The society has received a great deal of encouragement through the attendance of its visitors. Mr. Bingham comes to the meetings whenever he can find the time. Mr. Reynolds has spoken favorably of our work at one of the meetings. The alumni have also done their share to encourage us. Miss Marion Webster ’05; Miss Frances Barn-dollar ’04; Mr. J. H. Priest ’03 and Mr. Everett Cross, ’03, have been among our visitors. Many of these visitors have spoken in praise of the order during the meetings, which testifies for the general interest of the members.

The members this year have been unusually willing to accept the debates assigned them, whether the questions were for regular or extemporaneous debates. To tell the truth, the first prudential had more persons who wished to debate than could be accommodated during the term. The regular debates have without exception been very well worded, and showed thorough preparation. The extemporaneous debates, although of course lacking in order of treatment and the backing of best authority, show in comparison with those of other years that the members during the year have become better informed in regard to the common and current questions which are continually coming up.

A large number of the members have also become interested in questions of parliamentary law, and constant reference is made to the legality of proceedings. The result is that nearly all the members have become well informed in the common questions of parliamentary law, and the majority can now speak extemporaneously without embarrassment before the society.

Each week the current events have been read at the meeting, and have been a help to all the members by giving them in a concise form the interesting doings of the world. Every person who has been appointed to prepare these summaries has almost without exception performed this extra work so that it proved interesting for all.

During the last few years we have observed that the Philomathean society has had less attraction for the students during the spring and fall athletic seasons, but we hope that this year will be an exception, and the scholars who are on the baseball team will when possible attend the meetings.

Remember, fellow-students, that the Philomathean Society is as much a school institution as the baseball team, the school paper, or the track team. Indeed we believe it rivals the PINKERTON CRITIC in the work it does in spreading the merits of good intelligent hard work, and certainly it has no rival to compare with it in promoting clear and logical thinking and confidence in one's self.

Report of the Philomathean Society.

The first meeting of this term was held Jan. 9. This was the regular business meeting, and the following officers were elected:

President—C. W. Hobbs '06.

Vice President—F. J. Shepard Jr. '07.

Secretary and Treasurer—J. I. Miltimore '06.

Second Prudential—I. W. Gross '06.

Third Prudential—C. R. Hillman '06.

Marshall—Ivan Morrison '07.

On January 18, occurred the next meeting of the society. Mr. Hobbs, the new president, delivered an interesting inaugural address. The question for debate was: Resolved: "That intercollegiate football should be discontinued if radical reform is impossible." Affirmative, J. I. Miltimore; negative, R. A. Clement.

As one of the members of the society remarked, it was "playing one of the guards against the other." The fact that both house and judges voted in favor of the negative shows that while the left guard may be the tougher in foot ball, the right guard can outplay his opponent in argumentation.

At the next meeting, January 25, H. V. Abbott debated against F. J. Shepard, Jr., on the question: Resolved: "That the Federal Government should have control of Life Insurance Companies." Abbott had the affirmative, Shepard the negative. Both judges and house decided in favor of the affirmative.

On February 1, occurred the first double debate of the year. The question was, Resolved: "That the Philippine Islands should be given their independence as soon as possible." Nevins and Young had the affirmative side of the question, Morrison and Davis the negative; the judges voted in favor of the negative; the house, voting on the merits of the question, voted for the negative.

February 8, the question for debate was, Resolved: "That the country is the better place for a large university than the city." Miss Barndollar had the affirmative, Miss Perkins the negative. Both house and judges voted in favor of the affirmative.

On March 1, occurred the second double debate. The question was, Resolved: "That a lawyer stands a better chance in the city than in the country." Affirmative, Hillman '06, Miss Merriam '06; negative, Hobbs '06, Miss Marsh '06.

This debate was of interest to the members because the opponents were Seniors, and the undergraduates had a chance to hear the Seniors display the wonderful store of knowledge which they are supposed to have accumulated during their three years at Pinkerton. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative. The house also voted in favor of the affirmative.

SECRETARY.

The Academy Crow.

While peacefully resting on my perch one Friday night a while ago, I was disturbed by the shuffling of many feet apparently in the Academy Hall, and I flew up to see what the disturbance was. I found that a Junior sociable was at it height!

I watched a long time, but I saw mostly promenades with a few 'seconds' pause now and then,—for breath, I supposed. But I knew that they were all enjoying themselves immensely, by their hot, beaming countenances, and a great change came over their faces when they had to part at 9.30—sharp!!

On February twelfth, I noticed a large number of visitors wending their weary way up the hill, and as I "peeked" in through the blinds of the chapel windows, scholars were reading essays and reciting pieces about a great man—our first martyr-president, Abraham Lincoln. Musical selections were sweetly rendered by the chorus, the chorus teacher and the Orpheus Quartet. Just ten days later I saw more strangers climbing the hill at about noon, and this time I found it was a performance of a similar kind, given in commemoration of Washington's Birthday. Judging by the applause which resounded through the building after each piece, I suppose those painstaking students of the Senior and Senior Middle classes outdid themselves with glory.

There seemed to be great confusion about the Association Hall one Saturday night recently. I saw a crowd of P. A. boys rushing up three or four steps at a time, with their arms full of the funniest looking budgets—old hats, canes, wigs, powder, dolls, little carts and cast-off clothing of all kinds. Of course there could be but one explanation to all this,—the Mock Trial was to be repeated! And it was literally a "howling" success!

On the night of February sixteenth the girls around the Village went to spend the evening at Mr. Reynolds's house,—and what a fine time they did have! I heard them chattering all the way home and nearly all night long (for some of them left their windows open) about the great number of men they found hidden under sofas, chairs and tables, and in curtains and stoves and on mantel-pieces ;—the men couldn't have been much bigger than "Skimmy" to get into those places. And the games they played ! And the boys they made of such horrible expressions as "I kills a big man !" And last, but by no means least in the estimation of those girls, the delicious eatables, including fudge, which was a great temptation to a certain "anti-confectionist."

Not long ago two visitors in the persons of Mr. Grinnell and Mr. Walter Young went in to hear a few recitations, and they listened to poor, confused scholars making the worst flunks on record just because visitors were present. Even the Seniors in United States History seemed more stupid than usual (if possible.)

The boys are greatly interested in drill work, which they go through every Wednesday afternoon. That will keep them out of mischief one day of the week, and I hope to see a great improvement in certain round-shouldered boys who are sometimes mistaken for decrepit, old men as they go down the street.

Lately I have noticed going up and down past my roosting place a girl whom I used to see several years ago, but whom I haven't seen before since last June. I wondered why she was here, until one day I heard two girls talking together, when I heard one remark that Bessie Bradford had had to leave Mt. Holyoke College, so as to give her poor eyes a rest. The other said : "It must be awful ; for even if I do fuss about having to study sometimes, I know I should hate to have to stop altogether." This is the way all the scholars feel, I know, and they extend their sympathy (with perhaps just a touch of wistfulness along with it) to their unfortunate friend and schoolmate.

Guess what I saw in the Academy Hall on the several evenings of March 8, 19, 22.

There was a crowd of people, who seemed to be very much pleased with a series of pictures flashed upon a white sheet from a lantern in the rear of the hall. The pictures were very beautiful. At least I thought so, and I believe the Academy students did too, by the way they applauded. The man, who manœvered the machine and did the talking was Prof. G. N. Cross. If I remember rightly he has visited the Academy before. The first evening he showed us "The Charms of the White Hills." His lecture was both interesting and instructive. Next, views of Florence under the title of "The Lily of the Arno" were exhibited. The last lecture was about the "Three Historic English Castles." I enjoyed these evenings so much that I hope Prof. Cross will come again next year.

As I was flying about the other day I saw two Academy boys talking earnestly to each other. I perched on a tree near them and caught the words "baseball and practice." From what I drew from their conversation, a Mr. J. T. Keady has been engaged as coach for the boys in baseball. He was formerly the captain of the Dartmouth team. I hope the boys will do good work under his instructions, and become as famous on the "diamond" as on the "gridiron."

As I have flown around the Academy day by day I have missed Mrs. Pillsbury, the instructor in elocution and gymnastics. It seems she has been very ill and is now at a sanitarium in Clifton Springs. I hope she will come back soon, for the boys should be trained how to use properly their superfluous energy.

I felt very much grieved the other day to overhear the instructor of Physics announce to his class that I was a mere nothing, that no one really saw me. Imagine it ! I, the Academy Crow ! He even went so far as to intimate that no one could tell the difference between my actual self and a deep hole in the snow shaped like me. Don't be surprised if you hear my threatening cry of "Caw!" "Caw!!" 'neath the window of the Physics Instructor's room some morning.

Grinds.

When is the addition to be built on Hildreth Hall parlor? Miss B-t-e thinks she needs one for her own use. We wonder why?

At the party given by Mr. Reynolds Feb. 16, the girls were told to write down their fondest hope for the future, using words beginning with the first initial of their name. Miss Perkins wrote, "Having knightly partners," H. K. P. Miss Butler wrote, "Mending Carl's button-holes," M. C. B. Miss S-l-a C-a-k read, "Soaking Classes," S. C.

Said in History: "Cleopatra turned and began to flee."

Ask some of the Seniors how the skating was the night of the Junior social?

"Interfectēs omnēs lugebimus — after having been killed we shall cry." L. R. Clark.

"Maurice Bradford, will you please take the kitty out?"

It has been noticed that two of the Junior girls have plenty of stick-to-it-iveness when they are doing some things (?) It is thought that this energy would have better effect if applied to some other (?) things.

Teacher — (to scholar reciting.) I shouldn't think you knew anything about it." Scholar. — "Well, I know I don't!"

Heard in Geometry:—"If any number of ratios are in proportion the sum of all the antecedents is to the sum of all the consequences (?) as any antecedent is to its consequent."

Heard in Junior English:—

"Horatius landed him in the river."

"He met an unexpected surprise."

"Macaulay wrote many interesting stories.

among them, Lays of Ancient Rome,

Boswell's Life of Johnson, etc."

"As a boy he was very precocious."

"Smart."

Junior Spelling: "Aggreave." "He was an extrodanary (?) man." H. S. '09.

What makes Howard Abbott look so gloomy lately? What is the matter with him and M. C. B.?

"Dispel-dis-pel-put apart. }
He was dispeled for a week. } Varney.

"In some colonies the people threw the boxes of stamps into tea." C. W. H. '06.

"There is one policeman in every street Il y a un polise homme dans tous les rues." Fisher.

"Er liesz das Fenster machen." "He had the fence built." C. H.

One wise little Senior declares that lessons should be attended to before pleasure. Duck him!

H. V. A. (translating Virgil) "And she took her nifty beau (bow) on her back according to her habit."

W. G. '07 (translating Virgil) "Tell me if by chance, you have seen any of my sisters wandering about here, armed with a quiver and skun by a spotted lynx."

Little Willie—

"Demosthenes when born was physically weak and had an impediment in his speech which he overcame as he grew older." Greek History.

"Give force to the winds and overthrow their floundered ships - - and disperse their bodies over the sea."

"Cracking them by a wave it opens the land between the waves. The seething water maddens in the sands."

"Fuhlte er einen feinen körperlichen Schmerz auf Herzen." "He felt a fine bodily pain in his neck. Translated by W. G. '07 and the man was in love.

Ask Miss E-e-s-n '09 why a certain jar in Mr. Reynolds's room had to be washed?

Drawing Teacher:—D-v-s, how long does it take you to sharpen a pencil?"

D-v-s '09:—"I am sharpening two."

A junior, writing of the early Roman father: "He could sell his wife or children just as he wished, and after he died the sun took his place."

"Cæsar conquered all the battles."

Athletics.

The series of interclass basket-ball contests are practically ended, and the class of '06 has won the championship. That class has played and won five games, winning the first two in a series with '07, and also three straight games in a series with '09. The class of '06 has as yet been unable to get a game with '08. The percentage of the games '06 has won is 1000.

The class of '07 has played eight games, winning both the series with '08 and '09. The class lost two games in the series with '06. The percentage of the games '07 has won is .750.

The class of '08 has played six games. The class won, lost, and tied in the series with '09, but lost three straight games with '06 and '07. The percentage of the games '08 has won is 167.

The class of '09 has played nine games. The class won, lost and tied in the series with '08, but lost the series with '07 and '06. The percentage of the games '09 has won is 111.

This is the second time the class of '06 has won the basket-ball championship, the first being in 1904. The following is the line-up of the team: Neller, Hillman (captain), and Hobbs (manager), forwards; Gross, Clark, and Miltimore, guards; Bancroft, center.

At a recent meeting of the advisory committee of the Athletic Association, it was decided to accept the terms of J. T. Keady, the captain of 1905 Dartmouth base-ball team. According to his terms Mr. Keady will come about April 16. Having engaged a coach so skillful and efficient as is Mr. Keady, the Pinkerton base-ball team should be able to add to the laurels which the football team won last fall.

The following is the schedule as arranged by Manager Abbott:

Thursday, April 19, Alumni at Derry.

Saturday, April 21, Nashua High at Nashua.

Saturday, April 28, Manchester High at Manchester.

Wednesday, May 2, Milford High at Derry.

Saturday, May 5, Haverhill High at Haverhill.

Wednesday, May 9, Methuen High at Derry.

Saturday, May 12, Wakefield High at Wakefield.

Wednesday, May 16, Manchester High at Derry.

Saturday, May 19, Milford High at Milford.

Wednesday, May 23, Nashua High at Derry.

Saturday, May 26, Concord High at Derry.

Monday, May 28, Methuen High at Methuen.

Wednesday, May 30, Open.

Saturday, June 2, Open.

Wednesday, June 6, Open.

Friday, June 8, Punchard Academy at Derry.

Wednesday, June 13, Open.

Friday, June 15, Sanborn Seminary at Kingston.

Friday, June 22, Sanborn Seminary at Derry.

Alumni Department.

The alumni dinner which was given the 9th at Boston was one of the best in the history of the school.

From the 230 notices sent by the committee over 100 alumni were present.

An informal reception was held from 6.30 till 7.45, when Miss Warner played a stirring march and all descended to the banquet hall, led by Mr. Chas. H. Hood and Miss Mary E. Perkins.

At the tables pretty place cards which contained pictures of the "Old and New," the names and years of all the former Principals, the Boston committee and the menu were at each plate. After divine blessing had been invoked by Rev. Henry M. Penniman, all were seated and the dinner began. The last course being disposed of, Mr. Hood called the meeting to order and introduced the speakers and their subjects.

Mr. George Brickett '56. "A Few Words."

Mr. J. Warren Bailey '61. "Days of '60."

Miss Lydia P. Sargent '98. "The Attachment of the Unattached."

Prin. G. W. Bingham. "The School Now."

Miss M. E. Perkins '67. Secretary's Report.

Mr. A. W. Reynolds. "School Athletics."

Prof. H. P. Lewis. "School in the '70's."

Mrs. Carrie Clark Pettee, '77 "The Spirit of '76."

Rev. Charles L. Merriam. "The School Paper."

During the program Mr. C. A. Sefton '86, favored us with a solo. Miss Harriett B. Warner '61 was the accompanist for the evening.

At this point Mr. Hood called for remarks from Mr. John C. Chase '69, Samuel Fuller '78, and Henry S. Robinson '31, and for any business which might come before the meeting.

Mr. Brickett moved that a vote of thanks be given the committee, and Mr. G. K. Bartlett moved that a committee be appointed to make arrangements for a banquet two years later; both motions were seconded and carried.

The committee appointed is Albro Os-good '66, Charles H. Hood '78, Paul P. Foster '93, Mrs. Lucy Adams Proctor '66, and Miss Abigail Hazelton '84. After the singing of "O Pinkerton, We Hail Thee," the reunion passed into history.

NOTES FROM THE BANQUET.

Rah! Rah!! Rah!!! for '97, she has a fine representative in Miss Sargent.

The alumnus coming from the farthest distance was Prof. Curtis Page '84 who came from N. Y. City.

Alumni dinners have been held in '64, '87, '96, '99, '02, '04 and '06, in Derry and Boston.

Four postal replies came from California, people whose addresses till recently were near Boston, Henry M. Loud, '91, Mrs. Martha Chase Allen '67, Fred Virgin '60's and Miss Nora Thompson.

The committee wish it understood that the dinner was not held under the auspices of the Alumni Association; that organization is in Derry and runs the summer reunions, while the Boston dinners have been planned by self appointed committees every time.

As the trains of the Eastern Division, B. & M. were tied up, Dr. Warren F. Pillsbury '61 of Newburyport, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Clark coming from Beverly, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Brickett from Lynn, arrived at 9:30 after spending three hours on the train.

Alumni Notes.

(* Denotes non-graduate, year given being last of attendance.)

*'50's. Thomas Tyrie is a Congregational minister at Attleboro, Mass.

*'55. The academy library has been favored with a presentation copy of "The Chester Monument" by its compiler, the Honorable George C. Hazelton of Washington, D. C., who was the orator of the day when the monument was dedicated in 1904.

*'57 and *'67. Miss Charlotte B. Stevens of Washington, D. C., and Walter D. Stevens of West Derry, are niece and nephew of the late Gen Benjamin Butler.

*'61. Mrs. Milton Hood (Fannie Montgomery) is spending the winter at the old homestead in the southern part of Derry.

*'67. Mrs. Harriette Barber Hills, who is a widow, is living in Pasadena, California.

'70. John Baker who was a member of the class of '74 at Dartmouth and later took up a Theological course, is now preaching at Ferrisburg.

*'83. Wallace P. Mack is book-keeper for the Pillsbury Shoe Co.

*'84. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pillsbury (Fannie Tyson) are in Denver, where he holds the position as bank cashier.

*'90. Edward F. Adams, who for the past three years has been studying law at the B. U., has passed the Suffolk County Bar examinations. Mr. Adams will open a Boston office and be one more of our alumni lawyers practising in that city.

*'94. William B. Carr is shipping clerk for the General Electric Co., at West Lynn. Mr. Carr is married and has a daughter four years old.

'95. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spaulding (Nellie Brown) have moved from Salisbury, and are living on Rockingham street in Cambridge, Mass.

*'95. After having been lost sight of for several years George Wyman Porter has been located at Aiken, S. C., where he is engaged in general engineering work. He was married Oct. 26th to Miss Rosalie Wyman of Aiken. Porter can rest assured that he is pleasantly remembered by and has the best wishes of the faculty and student body of his time.

*'99. Harriette L. Chase, Alumni Editor is absent on a three months' trip to Mediterranean ports, returning via Paris and London. At the present time she is sojourning in the land of the "Lotos and the Palm." Recent advices intimate that she has not been entirely free from attacks of mal de mer. A love of a hat from "gay Paree" will quite likely be a part of the spoils of the trip.

'01. In a recent letter from Albert T. Melvin, at Constantinople, where the grass is already green and the flowers are in bloom, he writes many interesting facts concerning his work at Robert College. In this American college, where he is an instructor, there are about four hundred students; two-thirds of these are Greeks; about fifty Bulgarians; one hundred Americans; twenty-five Turks, and a few more of every nationality on the face of the earth.

About this time there is a great deal of enthusiasm manifested in the College over the Olympian games. He says that he is to train a great many fellows, most of whom are Greeks, to enter the contest at Athens in April.

*'02. Mabel H. Ridgeway is doing deaconess work at the Garden Street church in Lawrence, Mass.

'03. At last reports Mr. Herrick Clement was working in New York City.

'03. It looks as if some one were using the back of the '03 class letter to write up a divorce case on.

'03. About time to be thinking of buying another cake basket.

'04. Clara Ridgway is attending a business college in Dover, N. H.

'05. Arvilla H. Thompson, assistant principal of the Raymond High School, enjoyed a brief vacation recently in Brockton, Mass.

Engagements.

Carolyn Louise Chase ('95) of Derry to Dr. Raffaele Lorini of Coronado, California.

Marriages.
